Nancy Wynne Tells of Miss Marian Taylor's Singing. She Hears a Great Deal About the Devon Horse Show. Why Dorothy and Mary Are Not Great Friends

Did you know that Marian Taylor is to be Yum Yum at the Savoy production of the "Mikado" in July? You know she is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William J. Taylor and a cousin of Dickie Newbold, Anna Newbold, Percy Taylor and Mrs. Gifford Cochran, of New York. Her mother was Miss Emily Newbold, a sister of John S. Newbold, Clement and Arthur Newbold and Mrs. Beauveau Borie. And her father is a brother of Dr. Mason Taylor, one of her brothers being Newbold Taylor, married Anne Meigs and William, Jr., married Pauline Maynard from the South.

I had heard at various times that she was a very hard and now this year she has appeared in concert for various charity affairs and at several musicales and all praise her very much. And now we'll have the opportunity to hear her in the "Mikado."

Come week we have heard of us. Do you not? The Devon Horse show which is to be given for the benefit of the Bryn Mawr Hospital social service department, will open on Wednesday and go on till the Monday of next week, omitting Sunday, of course.

And everything possible has been arranged to make the affair a success. For the horse show end of it, it seems it will be an unusually large and interesting. Mrs. Long Coombes, of Kansas City, is coming for the first time, and as her stables last year were the biggest winners in America, she is one of America's largest exhibitors, her horses will be most interesting to those of us who have never seen them. You know her stock farm at Lees Summit, Mo., is the model farm of its kind in this country.

Victor Mather is the largest exhibitor at Devon this year. His horses are entered in sixty-one different classes, which will admit of going some. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hanley, of Providence, will be here for the show, and will bring their prize-winning string of saddle horses, which are very fine. Mrs. Macy Willets, of New Marlborough, Mass., are coming and bringing their string of miniature hackneys, which, not as the saying goes, but actually, are worth their weight in gold.

I am much interested in the country village and the shops which have been erected in connection with the show, where things will be sold on "Easy Street." Let us hope the prices will be easy, for even with the great reduction in the prices of things, they are still like the song, "Too High, Too High!" They are going to have a baby show, a hat shop, cigarette shop, hats, novelty shop, a number of things, besides the huge rummage sale which Mrs. Penn Smith has in charge. And all this will begin day after tomorrow.

There are still rummage sales going on, late though it may be in the season. The big one for St. Ignace House for Working Men, last week, which lasted two days, was very successful. I hear that there is to be one on Wednesday for the Alaskan Missions at 903 Walnut street. It is not a bad idea to hold these affairs after "the war" is over, because no matter how often you clear out your garage, you find something more after the spring cleaning. So if you have anything send it along today and tomorrow to 903 Walnut street.

Dorothy's mother and daddy had just moved into town and there are several very nice little girls who have been sitting and going by the window to the square to play and, so when Dorothy asked if she might go to the square and skate too, and that Mary's mother would be with them, Dorothy and Mother, who were busy getting the furniture arranged, said yes.

When dinner time came and Dorothy was not there, Mother began to be a bit worried, but before ten minutes had passed she came running in, cheeks bright with color and hair blowing from her pretty white brow.

"Why, darling," said Daddy, "you are late for dinner and we were worried, what kept you?"

"Oh, Mary and I skated up to her window. Her mother was waiting for us to take her furs up there. She was sick of them you see, she'd had them a long time and wanted something new."

"Take her furs up there! Why, what kind of a store has her uncle?" asked Daddy.

"A lovely store, Daddy: with baseball bats and balls, and pistols, and jewelry, and furs, and watches and everything," said Dorothy.

DREAMLAND ADVENTURES

STRANGE TRACTS BY DADDY. In this story Peggy and Billy pay another visit to Birdland.

CHAPTER I. Peggy's Toe is Nipped. Peggy and Billy were wading in the little creek that ran through Birdland. The rushing water gurgled around their bare feet and now and then a nibbling minnow tickled their toes. It was lots of fun.

But suddenly, as they waded slowly along, Peggy stepped on something that yielded. And the next instant that something grabbed her big toe, nipping like a pair of sharp pincers.

"Ow-ow-ow!" squealed Peggy, and she jerked her foot out of the water. Bang! Bang! Bang! she squealed, squirming and she would have lost her balance and flopped over into the water if Billy hadn't caught her. He lifted her in his two arms and carried her to shore.

All the while Peggy kicked and kicked, trying to shake the queer creature off her foot, and finally, as Billy set her down, she sent it flying into a hummock of grass.

"Ow-ow-ow!" Kill the awful thing," she cried, hopping around on one foot. Billy grabbed up a stick and started after the creature. Then, as he got a good look at it, he began to laugh. Instead of hitting it, as he started out to do, he poked his stick gently at it, and the queer creature grabbed the stick, just as it had grabbed Peggy's pink toe.

MANAYUNK. A dinner, followed by a May party, was given last week by the members of the domestic arts department of the Young Women's Christian Association at the cafeteria, 105 Cotton street, under the direction of Miss M. Reed. There were forty-one guests, among them being the following members of the board of directors: Miss Sarah Bovard, Mr. Bert H. Edger, as matron of honor, and L. V. Boyd, Mrs. Richard Hey, Miss Edna M. Patton, Mrs. William Beatty, Miss M. Williams, Mrs. Arthur Rans and Miss Anna Beatty.

It's only a crawfish," he giggled. "I thought a snake had grabbed you." "Well, it hurt," declared Peggy. "And it might have nipped off my toe if I hadn't kicked it away." "Shall I kill it?" asked Billy. "Or shall I throw it back into the creek? Maybe it has a family of babies waiting for it there."

Peggy hadn't seen that side of the matter before. "Throw it back, but don't let's waste any more," she said. "Let's run in the woods."

So Billy threw the crawfish back into the creek and away it darted under a rock. And sure enough, baby crawfish were waiting for it there.

Here and there and all about wandered Peggy and Billy, until all of a sudden, they came upon two sets of strange tracks.

"Billy stopped short. 'My gracious! What kind of tracks are these?' he cried. 'They are too large for rabbit tracks,' said Peggy. 'And too small for bear tracks,' declared Billy. 'And not round enough for a mule's tracks.'"

"No sharp enough for a goat's tracks," said Billy. "These are different from all other tracks I have ever seen in the woods."

"Let us follow them and see if we can find the creature that made them," suggested Peggy. "That's a good idea," said Billy, "but we must be very careful, for they may be fierce, hungry animals. I'm going to find a big club, and if anything comes after us I'll hit it over the nose."

(Tomorrow will be told how they stop to rescue friends in distress.)
